this book examines new member states problems with the absorption of eu funds since accession many new member states from central and eastern europe struggle to access their billions of development funds from brussels while existing research mostly emphasizes the role of states administrative capacities to account for absorption problems this study adds the so far neglected role of politics as party politicization to the equation the argument is tested using a combination of fuzzy set qualitative comparative analysis fsqca with two detailed process tracing case studies this book will appeal to scholars interested in eu cohesion policy post accession compliance and post communist politics the book explores the views of elites alongside those of the wider population in the european union the chapters place the new member states and the potential candidate serbia on the map of europe in this context for the first time the volume s comparative method goes beyond the standard old member states versus new member states divide it assesses regional differences within central europe and evaluates the problem of european and national identity formation perception of external threats to the eu including russia differences between economic and political elite views about the integration process and the connection between national performance and public opinion about europe even though in each country positive views are dominant about the integration process heterogeneous views prevail behind the image of a unifying europe the book s major contribution is that it makes the new member states more visible and provides hard evidence while remaining theoretically driven furthermore it covers the most important topics that emerge in studies concerning european integration the book is intended for those interested in european integration in general but central and eastern european comparativists will find it particularly useful this book was published as a special issue of europe asia studies
